What are ballistic plates?

Ballistic plates are a type of armor plate that is inserted into a carrier vest, providing additional protection to your body parts against ballistic threats. These plates are designed to stop high-powered projectiles such as bullets or shrapnel and can reduce or even prevent injury. The ballistic plates are made of heavy-duty materials such as ceramics, steel, or polyethylene.

Why do you need ballistic plates?

If you are operating in high-risk environments, for example, security personnel, military personnel, or law enforcement officers, ballistic plates are essential. They can protect your vital organs, particularly your heart, lungs, and torso, where most injuries occur during a ballistic attack. Additionally, ballistic plates can also boost your confidence levels, allowing you to operate with peace of mind.

Types of ballistic plates

Ballistic plates come in different types of materials and designs, ranging from soft panels to rigid steel plates. Soft panels are made of Kevlar or other flexible materials that can conform to the user's body. These plates are lightweight, easy to wear, and absorb energy upon impact. In comparison, hard plates such as ceramic or steel plates are heavier but provide better protection against rifle rounds, high-velocity bullets, and larger-caliber ammunition.
